PUZZLE EDITOR PLEASSED WITH WORK OF THE ARMY

Every Answer Carefully Written or Printed on Regular Coupon--Willard S. Morrill Gets "That Dollar."

Thanks, Puzzlers! Not a single answer received this week that was not carefully written or printed on the "Answer Coupon." A few of you had a little too much ink on you pen, but the Puzzle Editor appreciates the pains you have all taken and takes pleasure in deciphering a list that is not carelessly scribbled. Some of you little hands got tired before you got through what seems to you a long list and I am sure you do your best, and I thank you very much for being so courteous as to write just as plainly as you can.

By this time next year, writing and spelling teachers will wonder at your improvement and you can tell them you practiced on The Journal Puzzles. I trust every one of you who do your best will capture at least one dollar each in the meantime.

Willard Smith Morrill, Millview, Fla., is entitled to that dollar this week, his list being the first drawn from all the correct ones received. Only nine Puzzlers captured all the "fish" in last Sunday's Puzzle Pond, and only a few more got a fairly good catch.

No. 2, No. 5, No. 6, No. 7, and No. 9, outpuzzled the army, while No. 4 and No. 6 caused some of the brightest and oldest Puzzlers to fail.

Now, let us hear what you know about "Barber-shops." Most of you have had a shampoo or a "hair-cut" if not a "close shave."

Funny about barbers, isn't it? They never "talk" to ladies and children as the funny papers say they do to men. Wonder now if that is because they think men are more social or that women and boys and girls wouldn't stand it—or rather, sit under it?

What do you think about it? Following are the correct answers to last week's puzzles.

Noted Families In Escambia County

Messrs. Antoine and Beaby Collins were two of Pensacola's prominent citizens who exercised considerable influence along in the '40's. Antoine Collins, as I remember him, was about 6 feet high, with black hair and eyes. He was a full blooded Spaniard, and was a good representative of his nation. His wife was a Miss Pyburn, and was said to be a long ways better man than he!

Antoine Collins was in charge of what was known in those days as the Live Oak plantation, a piece of government property which was valuable for the live oaks which were at that time considered indispensable in ship-building.

Mrs. Collins was one of the most energetic women who ever lived in Pensacola. She was proprietress of one of the largest hotels in the city; but unfortunately it was burned down, and she, instead of giving up in despair, went back to their old place at the Live Oak plantation and started their vegetable and chicken farm, and, in a few years were able to build a hotel larger and better in every way than the first. The last building was called the St. Mary's Hotel, and was located some where near the present Pensacola Livery Stables.

Mr. Collins had a son whose name was Colan, and was what we would at this time call a dude of the purest type. His parents being wealthy, he was able to live a life of leisure, and, as is generally the case under such conditions, he contracted a habit of gambling and horse racing. He was a great favorite with the rural people, and was a familiar figure at all the social gatherings in the country. It was said that he invariably wore a corset when in company. His unl-form courtesy made him a great favorite with the country lasses. Colan ultimately got into a sad difficulty with Charlie Winters, a celebrated hotel keeper, in which Mr. Winters was killed, and Mr. Collins fled to Texas, and as I was informed, was killed in a bar-room by a desperado.

Mr. Collins had a daughter whose name was Cecelia, and she was said to be one of the greatest belles that ever graced Pensacola's society. She was extremely handsome and had every accomplishment that was necessary to make her popular at all the grand balls that were given in Pensacola during the regular visits of the war-ships. Yes, the men-of-war were familiar sights in those days, and well do I remember the flutter and excitement that prevailed among the young ladies of Pensacola. Oh! what a high time the Pensacola belles had dancing and flirting with the naval officers! When I compare those happy days, when I used to accompany my sister and Mrs. James Gonzalez to those fine balls, with the present time, I am constrained to say, dear old Pensacola has departed from her glory.

Mr. Editor, as regards the primary, I want to say right here, that I consider it the grandest move that has ever been made in civil government. Let your coming primary be conducted on right principles, and then let every true patriot go to the polls and cast his vote for the nominees, as though his own very existence depended upon it. The majority must rule and the minority must acquiesce; otherwise, we cannot exist as a free people.

RESOURCES OF WYOMING AT PACIFIC COAST FAIR.

Portland, April 1.—The Wyoming commission for the Lewis and Clark Exposition has organized and elected Governor Brooks president. The commission will at once begin the task of assembling a suitable display of the state's resources for the Western World's Fair. Besides the sum of $5,000 left over from the appropriation made for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the commission will have at hand $10,000 recently appropriated, and with this sum will be able to make a most creditable showing, as many of the exhibits collected for the St. Louis fair may be used at Portland. Of special interest will be the exhibit which the state will make to show the progress made in the redemption of arid lands.
